Stay away from case, Ombudsman urged

By Tillerpanti

SENATORS yesterday cautioned the Office of the Ombudsman against defying President Aquino's order to dismiss Deputy Ombudsman Emilio Gonzales III for his inaction on a case of a former police officer, saying the President has the power to "hire and fire."

Before President Juan Ponce Enrile's sacking of Ombudsman Mercedes Gutierrez to step away from the matter and let the "law take its course."

The Ombudsman is defying the President's "final" order to sack Gutierrez.

Assistant Ombudsman Jose de Jesus balked at the President's order, saying that only the Office of the Ombudsman has the authority to discipline its officials and that it had already cleared Gutierrez of culpability.

Sen. Francis Pangilinan said Gutierrez should resign the order even if it meant "physical" leaving Gutierrez from his office.

The Office of the President's Board of Governors administratively failed to resign and instead, after attempting to bypass of public trust for his delayed resolution on a case of dismissed against former Senate Rep. Isidoro Mendez.

The delayed resolution pushed Mendez to take a bench-warm seat in the House of Representatives in Manila in Aug. 21, 2010, which ended in the death of right-wing Sen. Isidoro Mendez.

PRAGUE, Agusan del Sur — A failed leader whose appointment prompted the abduction of 16 teachers and students on Friday was freed yesterday morning to help negotiate the release of his hostages, authorities report.

Three hours after Onda Perez was released to help in the negotiations, the hostage-part freed two of their hostages, identified as Agusan del Sur school superintendent Regino Lantimada and

Bishops slam Good Friday crucifixions

By Joseph R. Dy

IF YOU plan to get united to the cross during the Holy Week in the coming week, forget it.

Several bishops yesterday said that those who plan to crucify themselves during the week of the Passion and Resurrection are basically copying the actions of Christ during the last few days of his 40-day Passion season observed by Catholics.

This year's Holy Week begins on April 17, Palm Sunday, and ends on April 24, Easter Sunday, when Catholics celebrate Christ's resurrection.

"The body crucified today is not Christ's," Bishop Nelson de Jesus said over Church.com.

Rector William J. Dy said it was "too" to carry the cross as an act of penance, but he is willing to let men and women do it as a renewed act of faith.

Some Catholics practice self-flagellation and crucifixion on Good Friday as an act of faith and as a reminder for their sins.

They, thousands of devotees also devote hours where people crucify themselves during the Passion of Jesus.

In Padre Corda, a town in Pangasinan has become largely popular in pilgrimages and devotion for the crucifixion drama, where Catholics allow themselves to be nailed to the cross.

MASALIGAN CLASS 2011 HISTORY

The Masaligan Class was chosen from among 23,000 hopefuls who took the Philippine National Police Academy Cadet Admission Test (PNPACAT) on October 26, 2006. From among the bulk of applicants from all over the nation, only 1,300 made it to the passing mark that underwent medical, dental and neuro-psychiatric examinations, physical fitness and agility tests and the dreaded panel interview. Of all those who passed to be PNP Class 2011, only 388 made it, 300 boys and 88 girls. Out of the 388, only 240 graduated on March 26, 2011 with His Excellency President Benigno S. Aquino III gracing the momentous event.

On May 1, 2007 the traditional Recognition Rite was held. The first "test" that happens in every cadet's life. On June 16, 2007, the remaining few and proud members of Masaligan Class 2011, after forty-five days of the Breaking Period held their Incorporation Rite. On that day, their parents and loved ones came from all over the country to witness their sons and daughters become warlike individuals possessing the elements necessary for them to be considered as full-fledged cadets.

Being police had every challenges. Their body and instincts were continuously put to a test battling with themselves such as, fatigue, stress, depression and nervousness. Cadetship they learned was truly a grim struggle against oneself. Their plebeial days came to an end. On February 23, 2008, Masaligan Class 2011, clad in the regal full dress white marched on the most hallowed grounds of the Academy for the traditional Recognition Rite, making supremacy over their old selves, while the Upperclassmen wholeheartedly accepted them as cadets and beloved brothers and sisters.

The "MASALIGAN" their class name, is an Ilonggo term meaning honorability. It is also an abbreviation for "Mahimayong Saagap sa Upangin GABAY" Due to the class' motto, they are the new breed of sergeants that shall serve their communities and lead them to a brighter future for peace and order. "To sacrifice itself so that others may live."

For years they had to undergo academic and non-academic instructions to hone and prepare themselves as law enforcers and public safety personnel espousing the core values of Justice, Service and Integrity throughout their four years stay in the Academy.

So far, the Class holds the record of having the most numerous females to be accepted for cadetship training and also the most numerous females on the Top Ten. So name them all, from the Top 1, Albi Buncagan, Beverly Adoracion, Charlene Borogay, Ron Korya-Guerra, Jay Anne Cruz, Myrland Pascual, Johanesky Rios, Mica Carillo Mula, Catherine Cox, and the on Top 10, National Veterans and Veterans School.

Finally, on March 26, 2011, in great jubilation, they threw their status to the air with all their might and proudly yelling to the whole world that they are graduates.

Minimum payout for BF depositors raised

By Michelle K. Barrio

DEPOSITORS with P10,000 or less in a bank no longer have to file deposit insurance claims to get their money back if their bank is liquidated.

Under a new directive issued by the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. (PDIC), small depositors, as long as they don't have outstanding loans with the failed bank, shall automatically get their money back through postal remittance (PAC) from the PDIC.

The PDIC may be contacted to check 1,400 gun offices and 300 branches of Landed Bank of the Philippines nationwide.

The PDIC director said that of Banco Filipino (BF) Mortgage and Savings Bank, which was recently placed under receivership, and of those banks that might fail in the future.

"PDIC readies its commitment to protect small depositors and that is why our board of directors immediately approved the extension of coverage of the filing of requirements to depositors with balances of P10,000 and below," PDIC president Jose V. Santos said in a statement.

Small depositors with more than P10,000 but below P15,000 with Banco Filipino had asked the PDIC to exempt them from having to file deposit insurance claims, saying that they should not be compensated those with much bigger deposits.

PDIC board acted in the request which was approved by its board of directors, PDIC said.

With the new directive, PDIC said, about 82 percent of depositors of Banco Filipino are covered by the automatic payout system.

PDIC said these depositors of Banco Filipino would get their money back starting in May.

PDIC started sending PACs last week to Banco Filipino depositors with P5,000 and below in the bank.

For deposits of over P10,000, PDIC said it will start the process to mail cheques, if or as it has completed the process of valuations of deposit insurance claims.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) placed Banco Filipino under PDIC receivership on March 17, three days after the bank had declared a bank holiday.

The BSP said the bank had to be closed because it was insolvent. The liabilities of Banco Filipino had exceeded assets by P6.4 billion, the BSP said.

But the BSP said that Banco Filipino was an isolated case, and that the country's overall banking system remained sound and stable.

The director, however, is being contacted by Banco Filipino. The director said it had sufficient assets, and only a projected monthly heavy withdrawal in the days prior to its closure.

Querubin, other rebels to take oath

POINTER rebel leader Martin C. Alon Querubin will lead more than 130 warriors who will render their oath of allegiance today to seal the amnesty granted to insurgents who took part in military operations against the previous administration.

Querubin, who still leads a command for the February 2008 amnesty, along with several other commanders with government troops, has been deemed eligible for an amnesty.

Under the regulations of the Department of National Defense (DND), but also the rebels who applied for amnesty have to formally take their oath of allegiance to make the amnesty final and official.

Former Navy Lt. and now Sen. Antonio Trillanes IV, one of the main leaders of the July 2003 Odranoo mutiny and the November 2007 Manila bombings case, took his oath of allegiance on Jan. 27 along with 94 other former police military officers and enlisted personnel. Querubin, one of a handful of living signatories of the Manila Declaration, the highest military combat decoration, will be looked forward to finally getting his retirement benefits after more than 36 years of military service.

When all the swearing, I am now being looked, I am now granted to the previous administration for taking to court the signatures and writs of the past administration and giving me the opportunity to once again be part of mainstream society and a partner in nation-building," he said in a statement.

Another Odranoo mutiny leader, Captain Cags, Hermano Fajardo, is also expected to take his oath of allegiance.

President Aquino issued Presidential Proclamation 73 on Nov. 24 granting amnesty to those who participated in the three military-led operations against the Arroyo administration. Press Photo Bureau

On the surface, at least, an original idea. Spanish giant supermarkets such as El Corte Inglés and Mercadona—both leading companies in their respective countries—have adopted a similar strategy. The idea is to put a profit cap on the food, but not on the other items sold in the store. In Spain, the cap is set at 10 percent above the cost of the goods. In the U.S., the cap is set at 15 percent above the cost of the goods. The idea is to keep prices low enough to attract customers who are looking for a good deal on the food, but not so low that they are undercutting customers who are looking for a good deal on the other items sold in the store. It has been shown that the use of a small number of observations in the bootstrap procedure can lead to biased estimates of the variance of the bootstrap estimates. In this paper, we propose a new bootstrap procedure that uses a larger number of observations to estimate the variance of the bootstrap estimates. This procedure is shown to be more efficient than the standard bootstrap procedure.

When we started, the place was so desolate, barren, and malaria-infested

You should see it now. (and so should the gang of noisy do-gooders)

In 1966, going to Barrio Rio Tuba was like living an Indiana Jones adventure. To reach the place that nobody cared or dared to visit, you first had to endure 10 hours of a bumpy, dusty bus ride from Zamboanga to Princessa to Brooke's Point on the east coast of south Palawan. Then you had to spend the night there.

From there you only had one choice of transportation: a pump boat. On a good day, the exhausting sea journey to Barrio Rio Tuba took five hours. On a bad day, you just braved the rough seas and hoped reaching the future. And when you finally got to Barrio Rio Tuba, you were greeted by an undeveloped, barren site.

For all the biodiversity associated with Palawan, this particular spot was sadly unproductive land because of the largely infertile nature of the soil, an unyielding host to meaningful agricultural produce.

But, what nature has made agriculturally inhospitable it compensated by providing minerals instead. Minerals, in other words, that is indispensable in our lives in this modern world.

Turning an isolated, undeveloped and barren area like Rio Tuba into productive use, though, is not an easy task. You need vision, guts, perseverance over many years, a great deal of know-how and tremendous financial resources.

The rewards of responsible mining

Tubay, 47 years later, Rio Tuba, located in the municipality of Sabatan, is a thriving town propelled by the mining community. Thanks to the presence of Rio Tuba Nickel Mining Corporation (RTNMC) operations, in 2009, ranked as 4th in total assets, 4th in net income, 2nd in net income and 2nd in cash ending balance among the 20 municipalities in Palawan.

This newfound financial windfall has given its growing number of residents access to electricity, public water (in contrast, 273 municipalities in the country have no access to publicly extended efficient garbage disposal), healthcare is now a first class municipality.

We now employ more than 3,000 employees and contractors.

In 2013 alone, the combined Rio Tuba operations behind P24.6 Million for community assistance and livelihood projects under the RTNMC-managed Social Development Management Plans (SDMPs). But there is more.

Samuel Kaligaya and Rio Tuba Mining Corporation Together we bring free housing to the people

When we first started operations in our mining area, the indigenous people from the surrounding areas lived in squalor and illness that had torn.

Today, in partnership with General Kaligaya and his family, Antonio Melon, we have given the indigenous people free housing to improve their quality of life. 79 houses have already been built. 50 more units are under construction.

We have already spent P29 Million for this, and there will be more to come. More than just a comfortable and sturdy structure, the General Kaligaya-RTNMC partnership has given the indigenous a renewed spirit, a renewed confidence to raise their skills and act as a community and to share the joy of a town rising from poverty.

Together with Fr. Jerome Mangrup, SVD, and Arnold James Catholic Mission Foundation we bring Alternative Learning System to indigenous residents

Fr. Jerome Mangrup, SVD, is one of the country's leading educators. In partnership with Fr. Mangrup and Arnold James Catholic Mission Foundation, we provide support for the Indigenous Learning Center in Rio Tuba. We set up the first school in Rio Tuba to give the indigenous people access to alternative formal education. The program provides a viable alternative to the existing formal education instruction, one encompassing both the non-formal and informal sectors of knowledge and skills. 477 students were enrolled in 2012 and as of P2.6 Million that year. Forty-five years ago, before we started developing Rio Tuba, there was no educational concept, no school program whatsoever provided for the indigenous people.

We bring free elementary and high school education to Rio Tuba

We believe in the importance of education in the future of this country. More importantly, we believe that whenever education results in this isolated place should be competitive with the best schools available in the capital cities.

That's why we partnered with the La Salle Brothers to share their system of education in the elementary and high schools we have established. 1,230 students were enrolled in 2013.

More than 85% of them were from adjoining barrios and were non-dependents of our employees. Operating the schools cost us P26.8 Million in 2012 and we will continue to fund it.

Healthcare in the hinterlands

We have provided a hospital to take care of the healthcare of the community.

In 2010, 2,740 patients were admitted.

An additional 45,500 were treated as outpatients. Operating the hospital cost us P60.5 Million in 2010, and we will continue to fund it.

An Agriculture Research Center. Because we want the land to be productive.

Since 1966, there have been advances in agriculture.

Some unproductive land can now be tilled to give farmers new profits.

Productive land can be made more productive.

We constantly provide the latest farming methods, we brought to Rio Tuba one of the best technicians in the country, Dr. Silvestre Rabes, holder of a PhD in Forestry. Already he has made it possible for the farmers to increase their food production with the introduction of new and improved farming knowledge.

Additionally, RTNMC has donated more than three hundred heads of imported cattle to make Rio Tuba self-sufficient in their livestock needs.

Immense fruit bearing has also been introduced by RTNMC.

Responsible Mining: We help build the country

While occupying less than 0.35% (one third of one percent) of the entire Palawan land area, RTNMC has contributed to the national economy by generating more than US$200 Million in exports and paying almost P1.6 Billion in taxes. But more important is our leadership in promoting responsible mining to make the industry an important partner of agriculture in harmonizing the wealth from our land.

"We have to remember that there are only two industries in this world that create real wealth from nature. One is agriculture and the other is mining. All the rest of the industries depend on these two and cannot survive without them. Looking at the very basic, we cannot stop agriculture and mining because they produce the basic building blocks humans need to survive."

Responsible Leadership. Responsible Mining.

Family of 5 killed in fire in Caloocan

By Mica Calaga

A COUPLE and their three children died after they were trapped inside their burning house in Caloocan City before dawn yesterday.

Firefighters said they found four members of the Sagocan family—Helen, 40, his wife Paula, 37, their daughter Rey, 15, and son Brian, 13—trapped together in the attic of their longhouse on Narrahan Street in Kalayaan 181.

The body of the couple's other son, 13-year-old Patrick, was found in the kitchen. Firemen said he had apparently tried to smash a pot lid on the wall above the sink in order to escape.

The hole, however, was too small for him to pass through. BPOC Realty, home insurance, chief arson investigator, told the Inquirer that the fire started in the kitchen of the house.

Since the only way out of the house was through the kitchen, the family ended up trapped in their burning house.

"There was practically no way out, there were no other doors or windows," insurance said.

The victim's neighbors said the Sagocan family was from Calat, Annapolis. They moved to Caloocan City in the 1990s, making a living through the factory they opened in their house.

Donald Alarcon, a neighbor, said he knew the family was still inside their house when the fire broke out because the gate was locked.

"The son could have escaped from that fire. It was already huge when it woke us up," he told the Inquirer.

Alarcon said the victims were good people who lived simply. According to him, the couple have another son who recently went to Annapolis to study an acting program.

The fire broke out at 3:20 a.m. It reached the third floor and then spread to a nearby

Israel demands UN retract damaging report

JERUSALEM—The head of a United Nations panel that investigated Israel's invasion of Gaza two years ago has rejected the central and more explicit accusations of the report—Israeli and Palestinian civilian deaths.

Richard Goldstone, an esteemed Israeli-African jurist who led a panel of experts that spent months examining the Gaza war, wrote in an opinion article in The Washington Post, which was posted on its website Friday, that Israeli investigations into the conflict "indicate that civilians were not intentionally targeted as a matter of policy."

"I had known then what I know now," he wrote. "The Goldstone Report would have been a different document."

His article follows a report released two weeks ago by a committee of independent experts headed by Mary Robinson, former U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights, saying that Hamas had done its utmost investigation of its conduct and that Israel had devoted considerable resources in investigating over 400 accusations of human rights.

Goldstone's article told the Israeli public, where many people considered the 2009 publication of the Goldstone report an act of the most brutal of events in recent years. It was viewed as offering a question mark in front of a campaign to delegitimize the state and label it as a war criminal.

"We face three major strategic challenges," Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said last week. "The Iranian nuclear program, the Arab Spring, and the challenge of Goldstone."

The January article, Netanyahu called for the UN to retract the Goldstone Report as "false." "Everything we said has proven to be true," he said. "The report did not intentionally harm civilians, but it was an attempt to use investigative bodies and to use them to create a false narrative and to create a false narrative."

Netanyahu added, "I was not in the chair of the report."

Goldstone's report documented numerous examples of the mistreatment of Palestinian civilians by Israeli soldiers, and he did not back away from those findings in his article.

Others in Israeli government by telephone and email on Friday were unresponsive.

At least 1,400 Gazans were killed during the three-week offensive in 2009, including hundreds of civilians, Israel accused in the campaign after years of rocket fire by Palestinian militants in Gaza against southern Israel.

After the invasion, which shocked many around the world because of the graphic images of human suffering, the U.N. Human Rights Council asked Goldstone, who is Jewish, to lead an investigation into Israeli actions. He said he would do so on the condition that he could transfer his mandate to include human rights.

Human rights activists the Human Rights Council is to deeply believe based on a long history of targeting Israel and to refuse to cooperate with Goldstone or allow him to use Israel to cover up his work. He said in his newspaper article that this plan, which was, water, electricity, and about 4,000 homes, and the deaths of hundreds of noncombatants could only be understood as an attempt.

They also said Israel waged "a deliberately disproportionate attack designed to punish, humiliate and destroy a civilian population."

Rose roasts Raptors

Behind leading MVP bet, Bulls near East top seed

CHICAGO—Derrick Rose had 34 points and 14 assists as the Chicago Bulls took another step toward the top seed in the Eastern Conference with their 13th victory in 27 games, jumping on to beat the down-bowled Toronto Raptors, 113-106, on Saturday.

The Bulls lost Wednesday's game against Boston by 1 1/2. They also are within one of San Antonio for the NBA's best record after opening by one of the league's weakest teams.

Tom Thibodeau leader Phil Jackson's club received a win by a first-year coach in the Bulls' opening to 36-20.

Claudio Roca added 38 points and 16 rebounds despite early foul trouble, but being out of 17 points, Jay Glavin had 15 points.

and new athletes, and Kyle Korver came up big down the stretch to finish with 10 points.

In Los Angeles, Kobe Bryant had 24 points and 10 rebounds, and Eric Gordon ripped an 18-point effort into a game.

Other NBA results: Boston 90, New York 87; Dallas 92, Los Angeles 86; Sacramento 95, San Jose 87.

UConn, Butler battle for bragging rights

HESTON—Butler State University of Connecticut for the college basketball championship after both schools won their semifinal games at the NCAA Tournament on Saturday.

Unleashed Butler, a strong and gritty school in Indianapolis, from the State Games National League, finished a game in the 10th game for the second consecutive year by beating fellow upstart Virginia Commonwealth, 79-62.

Connecticut, meanwhile, edged Kentucky 96-55 in a match-up of two of the nation's most successful programs.

The championship will be played Saturday.

With Connecticut leading 54-52, Kentucky junior guard DeAndre Liggins missed on a potentially game-winning three-point shot with five seconds remaining.

Two late chances by the Huskies' Shabazz Napier failed, the senior 56-52 with two seconds left before Kentucky's Brandon Knight hit a three-point shot to seal the victory.

Monzones makes karting mark

ALL MONZONES OF IP-1 Motors Asia Inc. had secured the Formula 1, motor club in the kickoff of the 2011 Motors Karting Super Series at the Cagayan Raceway, showing a lot of promise despite competing in a new division.

Monzones, an 11-year-old Grade 5 in La Salle Cordillera students, caught an amazing aggressive rally from 15th place in the qualifying heat for the big finish due to a late start.

He posted the fastest lap of 49.433 seconds as he staggered up the 20-lap race in 36 minutes and 28.40 seconds, overtaking other 10-point karters in the combined field.

Monzones was actually third best in the race but lost it in a collision at the start of the qualifying heat.

Starting 15th, as the grid, he quickly staged to seventh place on the first lap of the period, moved up two more places on the 10th lap and ended fourth on the eighth lap and finished the race.

"I'm happier than ever. Double in the Mini, BOK division where I raced against my age group, dealing with the older and more experienced karters was a lot harder," said Monzones.

Strong challenger to PLDT-Globe duopoly

By Steven C. Chandler

WITH THE RETURN of a local telecom duopoly that is heavily skewed in favor of Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co., all eyes are on whether diversifying San Miguel Corp. can heat up the competition and balance an operator's quest for profitability with consumers' interests.

EMC, he argues, is confident it could become such a strong challenger to the PFI/Cloud Alliance brands.

"Our value business model will be very competitive," San Miguel president Ramon E. San said.

Another company source told the Japan Times that EMC would sell out a full range of Internet service within the next two years and was now quietly building an infrastructure that aims to match the network of cell sites already supporting the operations of its larger rivals.

The authors add one factor involving TMC despite being a new entrant into the capital market.

Ongpin firm invests P1.5B in urban recreation hub

By Devin C. Quinsac

ALPHALAND CORP., a corporate property developer led by former Trade Minister Roberto V. Ongpin, has declared its urban recreation hub initiative with a P1.5-billion investment in The City Club, which will rise in the Makati east business district by next 2013.

In an interview with the Inquirer, Alphaland president Mario Orosa said the new urban club—in the heart of the former Tandang Sora area—was designed to offer over more amenities than the plush Manila Polo Club except for the horse facilities. He said the club has several offerings, from a golf course that will be completed by 2013 to a new 18-hole golf course that will be completed by 2013.

The strong response for the club's theme, which includes both recreation and sports, is an urban jungle especially among the young, especially middle-class professionals working in Makati. Ongpin's group sees the timing of its entry into this business as "appropriate" as so many facilities of such kind have been built in the metropolitan area since the completion of the Rockwell Club in 1999 and the Tower Club in 2008.

"It's a market's demand and expanded interests have given momentum over a decade," Alphaland said in its announcement that construction of The City Club is on hold.

Orosa said selling was an "extraordinary" task and the number of shares being sold each month were being sold, thereby indicating to allow The City Club to keep sufficient inventory to own stock, which can be sold for a minimum price of P1 million over the club's completion.

The Alphaland chief said The City Club would likely have sold 2,000 of the 4,500 shares that it is authorized to sell for the time the urban leisure club is fully operational by Christmas of next year.

When the club started pre-selling shares in January, the shares were sold for an introductory price of P500,000 each, every month, the selling price is increasing by P100,000. "We raised the number of shares. For instance, the April we will sell only 50 shares for P700,000," because people are waiting for it and we don't want to sell all our shares," Orosa said.

The City Club has sold 300 shares each for January, February and March this year. In the succeeding months, only 50 shares will be made available.

The City Club is designed to offer up to 11 different types of amenities to a new leisure space, which is located in a central land area. It will have several themed experiences in addition to a tennis court and an open lawn area, a sports center and sports amenities for children. It will also have three-tennis courts for tennis, badminton, volleyball, swimming, basketball, and indoor golf facilities as well as business facilities including meeting rooms, conference rooms, an internet cafe and a library.

"If you compare it with Manila Polo Club, we have more amenities except the horses and Polo Club is selling at P7.2 million (per share) or it's really a fantastic deal," Orosa said. Ongpin's group, which was established by former Philippine Airlines, will likewise employ 100 employees, including 50 who will be in charge of the golf course and 50 who will be in charge of the other amenities. The club will be located in the heart of the city, near the Makati East Business District.

The Inquirer and Publishing Co.

recently approved the registration of shares to be offered by Alphaland Leisure Island Club Inc. (ALICI) in the form of 791 primary preferred shares and 1,519 secondary shares at a minimum price of P2 million a share. ALICI is a subsidiary of Alphaland Leisure Island Club Inc., which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Alphaland.

Shares in Manila will be sold for a minimum price of P2 million each when the club is fully operational but the club will be selling the shares at a discount of 10 percent. The club will be selling the shares at a discount of 10 percent.

Globe adopts Internet 'fair use' policy

By Paolo C. Manalili

GLOBE TELECOM is cracking down on abusive Internet users who log on the available bandwidth, in the process of enforcing the company's new policy of "fair use" of its network.

In a statement last January, the company said it had adopted a "fair use" policy that would put a cap on the amount of content users can upload and stream, and that content would be downloaded for their personal use.

In a recent internal analysis, Globe said about 5 percent of abusive subscribers use 80 percent of the available bandwidth in the company's network.

This leaves only 20 percent of the capacity to be shared by 95 percent of the remaining users.

"Globe implemented a policy that prioritizes a more responsible use of using the Internet that will ensure fair and optimum usage of its broadband services across all subscribers," the company said.

The usage cap, it said, would affect only users who download data in excess of 1 gigabyte a day or the equivalent of about 250 MP3 files.

Telecommunications firms have been criticized for plans to put usage caps on Internet users, which customers and analysts have argued will slow down broadband speeds in the Philippines and be lower than in neighboring countries.

Consumers groups have said that companies should invest in improve their network instead of penalizing users.

The Globe said its new policy aimed to preserve the "quality of experience" in order to provide subscribers with seamless, uninterrupted and reliable service.

"The company said network bandwidth was a finite resource, and it was necessary to adopt regulations that promote responsible and fair use of the Internet to preserve bandwidth and ensure the quality of service for all subscribers," the company said.

The company claimed the fair use policy would also help curb copyright infringements through the Internet.

A recent study by data firm NetScout Systems said that 10 percent of content downloaded, particularly and another 40 percent were music and television shows.

The study further claimed that due to 24 percent of global Internet traffic was piracy-related and nearly one-quarter of the traffic on the Internet is related to unauthorized distribution of copyrighted materials such as movies, TV shows, music and video games.

"These activities, apart from being unethical, also utilize a significant amount of bandwidth network data, which penalizes other subscribers to enjoy the same quality of Internet connection," the company said.

Bullish trading seen by bringing back investor confidence in the market.

The heavy net buying was seen after the start of the year but also slowed, with changes in volume pointing a net buying position in some days.

Market bulls, however, at the time of the 10th National Trade Fair at the DMU Convention Center, Bldg. 2, Davao, said the fair was a success.

The fair was a success, they said, because it was the first time in the Philippines that the fair was held in a city outside of Manila.

"Looking on how the economy has been slow since the last trade fair, we are seeing a positive trend in the economy and increasing confidence in the market," the fair organizers said.

could continue which kept the market below 4,000 for a time," he said. "Although net volume continues to be low and considered, we still believe that the overall market may turn back bullish. Technical analysis may still point to the market but local developments will be the driver in the coming weeks."

If positive news would continue to pour in this week, the index would be able to hold its position above 4,000, Manalili said.

On Friday, the Dow Jones Industrial Index was up 50.00 points or 0.44 percent at 11,175.75 on the back of a technical index rally. The index was up 100 points in the US despite its lowest level in two years in March and the market was even more in a state of confusion as investors tried to make sense of the market.

Cebu Pacific increasing local flights for summer season

Targets major tourist destinations

By Paolo G. Matibag

GOINGINGWILL Cebu Pacific is increasing flights to key domestic destinations to meet the rise in demand for the summer season next year.

In a statement, the listed budget carrier said it would add additional flights to its service between Manila and Butuan, one of the most popular in its network.

Other routes to get additional flights are the airline's service between Manila and Cebu, Iloilo, and between Iloilo-Cebu-Manila.

These routes are served by Cebu Pacific's fleet of eight Airbus A320neo and A321neo aircraft.

"With the new flight frequencies, Cebu Pacific will operate an average of 60 turbo-prop flights a day," said Captain Eric, the airline's vice president for marketing and distribution.

The new route plan also includes turbo-prop aircraft flights to Baguio in Philippine Airline (PAL) and Baguio Express of 94 a day. Both airlines are owned by Lapad Latican.

Cebu Pacific continues to play a key role in Philippine tourism by operating destinations such as Boracay, Pangasinan and Cebu (Davao) in all travel and by continuously being recognized by some local industries as the market leader in other long-haul routes.

capacities," Eric said.

"These increased flights will allow passengers to extend their different programs in such cities such as Cebu, Iloilo and Manila. The increase of tourism from one city to another within the country greatly drives the tourism and economy," Eric said.

Aside from its turbo-prop planes, Cebu Pacific also operates 18 Airbus A320 and 15 Airbus A321 aircraft.

By the end of 2011, Cebu Pacific will be operating a fleet of 37 aircraft—with an average age of 2.8 years—one of the most modern aircraft fleets in the world.

GMA 7 continues to lead ratings game

TELEVISION RATING GMA 7 Inc. continued to dominate nationwide ratings in the first three months of the year as it sought to corner the ABS-CBN as the country's top talent destination.

The also saw solid affiliate contributions in the industry due to the entry of TV5, backed by the well-funded group of businessmen.

GMA Network's grip on the number one spot on television as the network and its affiliates continued to lead in the nationwide ratings game, according to Nielsen.

The latest survey by AGB Nielsen Philippines, which asked viewers to know where their television set was, showed that GMA posted an average audience share of 30.7 percent in the first quarter of 2011. This was higher than ABS-CBN's 28.8 percent and TV5's 15.2 percent.

For local talent issues, GMA generated 31.2 percent against 28.8 percent for ABS and 12.1 percent for TV5. In Mega Manila, GMA posted a 33.1 percentage-point lead over ABS-CBN with 30.3 percent and 25.2 percent, respectively. TV5 was also rated with 17.3 percent audience share.

For the month of March alone, GMA led a 16 percent average audience share, 3.3 percent up from ABS-CBN's 9.8 percent; 18.2 percent higher than TV5's 15.8 percent in the viewer index.

"They were [GMA's] product programs that made it in the top 10 programs in Urban areas," the company said.

Trade blocs support BSP move to close bank

Businessmen say it's vital to preserve public trust

By Michael S. Barro

KEY BUSINESS groups collectively issued a sign of what when the Senate passed the Philippine Bankruptcy Law (PBL) last week, the Senate decided to shut down Banco Filipino.

The groups—Financial Institutions Association of the Philippines (FIAP), Manila Business Club (MBC), and Management Association of the Philippines (MAP)—said the BSP helped preserve the public's confidence in the banking sector by taking action on institutions suspected of mismanagement.

Industry players stressed the importance of preserving public confidence in the banking sector, which depends on depositors to generate resources and for lending and other investment activities.

"The presence of a regulator is meant to prevent loss of confidence in the banking system that can put the proper functioning of the economy at risk," the three business groups said in a joint statement released Friday.

The statement was issued shortly after Banco Filipino's lawyers and Mortgage Bank filed charges against BSP officials before the justice department.

Banco Filipino took legal action on Friday to protect the alleged unwarranted closure of its branches. The bank also accused BSP officials of graft.

The BSP, in turn, filed legal charges against Banco Filipino officials. The regulator accused the bank officials of violating anti-banking regulations, including extension of large loans to owners, directors and officers of the institution.

The Monetary Board of the BSP decided on March 17 to place Banco Filipino under receivership of the Philippine Deposit Insurance Corp. three days after the institution closed its bank holiday window to service withdrawals of clients.

This was the second time Banco Filipino was ordered closed. The first was in 1995, when the old central bank placed the savings bank under receivership for insolvency.

The old central bank was criticized for the closure of Banco Filipino, especially after the Supreme Court ruled in 1996 that the closure was illegal and new laws to an attorney then were with almost of discretion.

Banco Filipino said the BSP is committing the sin of its predecessor by making the same mistake. The bank claims it is not insolvent, and has assets to meet its obligations.

The PBL, 1998, and BSP law to implement the BSP decision, saying that the closure of Banco Filipino was appropriate since "not desirous to be accorded the presumption of regularity."

Broker says PH trade to offset slump in HK

By Doris C. Quinsio

LEADING ONLINE stock broker, Citicorx Online.com (COC), expects to Philippine-based operators to make up for the slump in Hong Kong business this year, especially now that the company has started a new, specific market while a consensus is expected to grow of small investors.

For the first time, COC's Philippine operations accounted for 44 percent of its total revenue in 2005, up from only 16 percent in the two preceding years, COC president Gonzales said in a prepared statement during the company's annual shareholders meeting last week.

COC, the dominant online stock trading in the Philippines over the last three years, nearly doubled its revenue in 2005, from about $1.5 million in 2004 to $2.5 million in 2005.

The revenue in average annual per client, but said, was due to a combination of additional investments put in by each investor as well as the increase in the value of stocks held, after stock prices increased in the last two years.

The company, which operates in brokerage operations in the Philippines and Hong Kong, posted a consolidated net profit of $2.5 million last year.

This was far compared to the previous year, as operating results were in Hong Kong operations fell sharply.

Nevertheless, its 2005 operating profit of $2.5 million was significantly higher than the $1.5 million percent average of regional stock brokers.

But said COC net profits this year would likely remain flat. Hong Kong operations would continue to weigh down on overall business despite growth in Philippine trading.

"This year, however, in the Philippines we will continue to grow as it will show in Hong Kong, with China trying to correct money supply... to slow down the economy" said COC, then followed Lee.

Lee said that since COC, accounted for the biggest share in terms of the number of transactions at the Philippine Stock Exchange in 2005, looking at market share in 10 percent from 15 percent the previous year.

After creating the biggest pool of small investors in the local equity market, COC is now making investments in new markets with the creation of a new business unit, the Private Clients Group (PCG).

It is headed and managed by stock market veteran John Fernandez and George Wong.

The new unit offers premium trading advisory service for high-risk and institutional investors willing to seek in at least P5 million, and also seeking higher returns in the equity market.

Lee stated the target investor of the new unit is a "pure play" subscriber as opposed to a "pre-play" subscriber.

"They're about the growth," Lee said, referring to the high-risk market.

During the small investors will retain part of the company's revenue, Lee said.

But he could not say if only 20 percent of such small investors

Ford PH manufacturing operations binged on auto plan

By Abigail L. Rio

After three non-competitive, considering that the local market is smaller and poorer than foreign markets, it added.

The production of the next generation Ford Focus is scheduled to be transferred to Thailand from the Philippines by next year, a decision that marks the future of Ford's vehicle assembly business here uncertain.

But Ford and the company would still continue to produce the Ford Focus and the Mazda 3 here, and that the production of other models locally may now be being studied.

"We'll continue to build products here. While studying potential future products that can be made in our local plant. We'll make other models here for export," he said.

The company's 300,000 Laguna 3s are now running at less than 50 percent of its 300,000-unit capacity.

Last year, it claimed to a combined 15,000 units of the Focus, Escape, and Mazda 3, 10,000 units of which were in the export market.

In terms of local sales, FORD registered a 74 percent hike in the first quarter of 2007.

Wealth management sector up for growth

Demand for trust services growing, BSP says

By Michelle V. Rana

THE WEALTH management sector is seeing growth in the Philippines, despite a rough economic environment, as opportunities for Filipino investors to acquire income will abound, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

Speaking before members of the Trust Officers Association of the Philippines (TOAP), which had its general assembly last week, BSP Governor Benjamin Dominguez A. noted that trust being managed by banks' trust departments had grown significantly despite the sub-prime crisis in 2007 and the recent credit crunch, according to a report that peaked in 2006.

As such, he expressed optimism that even if economic conditions were more challenging this year compared to last year—when the Philippines grew at an annually fast pace amid a global recession—the trust sector would remain an attractive investment strategy.

"Indeed, the outlook for the industry is positive," Dominguez said.

The central bank chief noted that assets under management by the trust industry amounted to P2.12 trillion by the end of last year, equivalent to about 0.5% of the economy's total output and almost double the P1.07 trillion registered in 2005.

"The strong public has shown its continued confidence in the banking system not only through traditional banking services, but also through ways to better manage their savings," he said.

Dominguez said that trust services are likely to avoid their share of available wealth management services, which include retirement services and investment management (a la individual and fund services, depending on their risk and income profile).

He said that following the bumper year for the Philippines last year, when the economy grew at its fastest pace in over three decades, the country is poised to take on some daunting challenges this year.

These include rising global oil prices resulting from the tensions in the oil-producing regions of the Middle East and North Africa, and the natural disaster in Japan that could disrupt demand for Philippine exports.

Growth in temporary jobs hints at wider US economic recovery

NEW YORK—Demand for temporary workers is broadening to professional occupations like technology and engineering, offering evidence that a long, slow US jobs recovery may finally be getting some momentum.

As recession-era economic constraints continue to drive sales at temporary staffing agencies, as employers look for building, they place more of temporary workers in typically a leading indicator of labor trends, strong demand suggests the wider labor market may be moving the needle.

In areas such as engineering, employers want workers for accidents, which could soon allow staffing companies like Manpower Inc. and Robert Half to begin to find in-house roles, filling margins.

Demand increase

"Overall demand remains very good," said Tim Gilliam, head of Manpower's South American operations. "Clients are good, but their business has been strong enough that they need talent, and they're looking for temporary and contract workers first, then help-to-hire, then permanent positions."

Manpower US payroll jumped 25,000 last month, the biggest increase since May, and the firm's employment rate fell to a two-year low of 6.9 percent.

The permanent segment showed temporary payroll up by 28,000, a faster pace than in January. The percentage of temps in the workforce rose to 1.71 percent, higher than

Firms seek to fill positions in engineering, special fields

2008 but still below a record high of 2.83 percent in 2005.

Factors to watch in coming months include the effects of a gallon gasoline and Japan's earthquake and nuclear crisis, Gilliam said. Higher defense efforts, such as more companies, have cut back on temps because of shortages in their supply chain, while others have taken on more temps because they're picking up work from Japan.

"There's still a lot of uncertainty in temp usage continues to grow," said Ray Korman, CEO of SPS Group Inc.

"Seasonal phenomena in it, autos, accounting, mortgages, if ever, it's much more stronger than people anticipated," he said.

As March saw job growth, payroll will take about three years to reach pre-recession levels.

Assessment levels in the first quarter were the smallest, said since 1980, and private employment added 100,000 jobs in March.

A survey of US chief executives by the Institute for Supply Management found more than half are looking to add jobs over the next six months and their view of the economy brightened.

Staffing executives often anticipate the positive but evidence of strong demand also comes from outside the sector.

Building Recovery, where buildings include a New York business launch that leads country in staffing companies and under their hands, are good writing demand for temps, as probably professionals.

Disputed data

Dark demand turned up this month last year and last year's "quarterly" into 2011, said John McIlroy, president of staffing.

"The bank's last quarterly estimate directly with the number of temps employed, and 2011 has identified temporary help as a major growth area for its financing business."

"We'll be up double digits again this year but it will exceed the growth we saw last year. It's accelerating," McIlroy said. "Technology is really picking up. There is more and more of a need to bring in more temporary talent people."

For investors in staffing companies, a key question is when the second round levels that could end provides to take prices and lower their margins.

JP Morgan analyst Andrew Rosenbaum, with "unweighted" ratings on both high and low, Morgan says such needs benefit from an economic environment and calls the outlook for the remainder of 2011 "optimistic."

Tightening supply

"Supply is beginning to tighten, and though not yet enough to push up full rates, we are seeing prices starting to rise only late in the year," Korman said in a research note.

Higher rates will appear first in the engineering field, where there is available but skilled candidates sometimes face multiple offers, said Korman's firm.

SPS's Korman said it was unclear whether staffing companies would gain pricing power, but said, "We may see some wage inflation, which means better margins for our industry."

Global recession weakens women power

Number of women
holding top posts
down, study says

By Vanessa B. Hidalgo

THE RECESSION global economic recession that hit the United States around the globe has also affected the proportion of women holding key positions in senior management.

According to the 2011 Grant Thornton International Business Report (IBR), women now only hold 28 percent of senior management positions globally, a drop from 34 percent in 2009 and up by just one percent from 2004.

The Philippines followed a similar downward trend, with the proportion of women in senior management dropping significantly from 47 percent in 2009 to 2008 to the current 35 percent.

Smallest percentage

This is the smallest percentage ever recorded by the IBR for the Philippines since it started including women in senior posts in 2004.

This year also marks the Philippines' lowest ranking in the country table at 10th place, behind Thailand, Georgia, Russia and Hong Kong.

"Generally speaking, when a recession hits and one parent has to sacrifice by cutting jobs or careers, it will likely be the lower-paid one. And unfortunately in many countries, women are still getting paid less for doing the same work as men," says Mia Higinbotham, partner of Audit and Assurance Division and head of the Global group at PricewaterhouseCoopers (PwC).

The firm is a member of Grant Thornton.

In 2004, the Philippines came second only to Russia in terms of representation with the highest percentage of women in leadership positions. And in 2007 and 2009, the Philippines led countries surveyed with women holding 50 percent and 47 percent, respectively, of top management positions.

"The hope the financial crisis is partly to blame for the drop is not ringing," Higinbotham says in a statement.

Far ahead

The Philippines, however, is still far ahead of other countries.

The report shows that in the world's richest countries—United States, Japan, Germany, France, United Kingdom, Italy and Spain—only 36 percent of senior jobs were held by women, roughly less than the Philippines' 35 percent.

In the Philippines, the research shows that a little over half of the women who held key senior management positions are in finance, with titles such as Finance Director and Chief Finance Officer.

Overall, only 23 percent of women are represented in senior management roles.

How can this development be a positive one?

"It's a good sign that women are finding their way to senior leadership posts. It shows that their decision-making skills and their integrity are valued in a professional setting," Higinbotham says.

Fortunate women

The study also notes that the women in the Philippines are fortunate to have a strong family network to support them in their quest to pursue top positions at PwC.

But cautioned the research primarily by telephone interviews lasting approximately 15 minutes with each respondent.

For the Philippines, the interview was conducted face to face with each respondent who was the public persona.

Target respondents are chief executive officers, managing directors, chief or other senior executives from 30 companies.

NEOCLASICAL detailing was inspired by the neoclassical and the American colonial period. The structure is a landmark of the University campus.

Which old structures qualify as heritage?

RECENTLY HERITAGE structures were among those condemned by DPWH Western Visayan Institute of apparent failure to meet Building Code seismic requirements.

DPWH Secretary Angara expressed, "If designated as cultural heritage structures, they should be preserved, provided they do not endanger lives. Please let us know which structures are like this."

Although no real and list of heritage structures exist, lists of the specific structures under consideration are maintained by the National Commission for Culture and the Arts (NCCA), National Historical Commission of the Philippines (NHCP), the National Museum of the Philippines (NMP), the National Library of the Philippines (NLP), and the National Commission of the Philippines (NCP).

Heritage sites covered by these agencies are:

- Historic sites and structures bearing a black marker are under the protection and preservation of the National Historical Commission of the Philippines.
- A number of churches that have been awarded National Shrine status are preserved by the National Shrine.
- Five Philippine sites are inscribed on the United World Heritage List: (1) Tubbataha Marine National Park in Palawan; (2) The Baroque Churches of the Philippines (including San Agustin, San Ildefonso, San Agustin, Paoay, Santa Maria, Santa Maria de la Asuncion in Ilocos Norte, Santa Maria de la Asuncion in Ilocos Norte, Santa Maria de la Asuncion in Ilocos Norte, Santa Maria de la Asuncion in Ilocos Norte, Santa Maria de la Asuncion in Ilocos Norte); (3) Historic City of Vigan, Ilocos Norte.

Lens focus on the Internet

By Gregory B. Matthews

THREE local photographers were awarded the country and took pictures depicting how the Internet has become a valuable tool in the everyday lives of Filipinos.

Model-turned-photographer Jo Ann Macapet, Apple Japan from the illustrious family of photographers, and fashion and adventure. Internet (aka Netizen) captured through their camera. Smart Communications, Inc.'s belief that the Internet should be fun comes.

"The Internet is the new village," said Simon Short, wireless access director for the French Telecom group at the Council for an American-style Change in France. "The Internet should be for all. Through this project, we hope to share all kinds of information of how people are utilizing the Internet because of the positive impact it can make on lives and communities."

Under the project, the three phytosurveyors traveled to 12 locations to capture images and stories of people and communities that have enjoyed the benefits of forest connectivity. The places include Nagu, Lamelara Bay, Uluwatu, Minicoy Island,

Ind. Studies, University of San Diego; Eugene Carson, Fisheries; Massachusetts, Calif. Tropical Forest, Robert Phillips, Quercus; Sam Myster, Indiana; and NCR.

Having showed up close to the limit, not too changed the way people live, the three photographers said that they are proud of being part of the project.

"The shoe design never made me realize the occasion we had reached," Tapscott said. "I can't imagine me free without the bracelet."

"I know that the Internet has greatly changed the way people live in general," said Minowa. "But the choice made me see this in a different light and realize the possibilities for Filipinos in the future."

Shagel immediately said that her assignment in Illinois Central and in San Rafael, California made her realize the importance of the Internet in other fields such as in health and in the environment.

Gummi during the launch phase had strong potential to vary on the different ways to access the Internet via an interactive device. Gummi launched products such as the Gummi Site Plug-In, Gummi Site Pocket PC's and Gummi SitePad™.

13 shows in five weeks—it's local theater's days of plenty

Not only was the number remarkable, but the variety, too—from glitzy musicals to intense dramas.

By Sidney Carter

A FUNNY thing happened on the way to the summer break. Ordinarily a fellow period as the local theater companies gird themselves for their summer workshops, this year's first quarters see something different: a glut of productions opening one after the other and running simultaneously, making this period certainly the busiest and most profitable local theater has seen in years.

From Manila to Cebu, summer theater workshops

Caveat emptor: Be sure to know the credentials of the company giving the workshop

By Walter Ang
Cebu Reader

"WHAT'S MOST rewarding about our annual summer workshop is witnessing the process of transformation that happens to the workshoppees," says Gertrude Tan, the new foundation's founder and artistic director for five years.

"Some shy and inhibited young boys and girls, they learn to deliver a speech line, sing a song, work out dance steps. They are initially strangers who become friends in such a short time, and their creative ideas seem to be coming from a bottomless well. I fully expect to have a lot of requests for theater with them."

Gertrude is just one of many donors companies that are holding summer workshops this summer (see listing below). Workshops are available for children, teens and adults (some groups offer pre-teen classes also). Most groups have children's and teens' classes during the daytime and classes for adults during the evenings. All workshops usually end with a recital. While teens learning the craft of expression, children gain social interaction skills, while teenagers and adults get their foot in the door should they decide to pursue careers in the industry. There are usually no expenses in terms of acting or work shop experience. A donation letter or a parent who will have you in good to help you improve your self-confidence will do.

While adults differ from groups to group, have acting classes for kids usually require a hands-on demonstration of the content and to improve focus, concentration, observation, and most importantly, to build confidence. The games help students with coordination, agility, self-esteem and experiencing the importance of teamwork.

Teens and adults usually have business and exercises on spontaneity, improvisation, body and voice work and script analysis, among others. Beyond basic writing,

Bersong EuroPinoy slated April 16 at Instituto Cervantes

INSTITUTO CERVANTES de Manila today launched "Bersong EuroPinoy," a unique poetry event of Filipino and European poets, April 16, 2 p.m., at Instituto Cervantes in San Juan.

An interesting poetry social started in 2009, Bersong EuroPinoy was initiated by Instituto Cervantes as part of the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Instituto Cervantes in Manila. It is often regarded as a "repertoire of the best of languages" as it brings together renowned Filipino poets as well as different poets from various countries of the European Union. For this reason, Bersong EuroPinoy has, and will, celebrate the "Bersong EuroPinoy." As stated by the foundation of Bersong EuroPinoy.

Members of the EU diplomatic corps in Manila participate in their own language, choosing both their own words and those of the other poets. They will then compare the reading with English translations of the poems.

Celebrated Filipino poets, on the other hand, participate in the event by reading their own works written either in English or Filipino.

Following the tradition of our first Manila reading campaign to the Light and Trust Authority when Filipino poets have been reading their daily dose of Spanish, Filipino poets are now expanding our campaign with the Bersong EuroPinoy which aims to share the poetry

DUNKIN' Big Dunk IS HERE!
 where it's all about the Dunkin' Donuts

DUNKIN' DONUTS

Let's hear it for Daboy's boy

By Report Ser (G) Jr.

IT'S QUITE obvious that Ryan Remando is Daboy's son.

The youngest of Rudy Remando and Lorena Solis-Remando is now inheriting his dad's fame and movie stardom.

Full-page from episode when asked what he got from the late Daboy. He got his old clothes. Also his good looks, but he's more handsome. Plus, he might be his dad's son.

Now that the 20-year-old Philosophy graduate (from UP Diliman) has joined showbiz, he says he appreciates his name more. "I've realized how difficult his job is," he explains. "That's why I'm here."

He wants to show his affection for his dad every day, he says. "Dad, with simple gestures, I like him whenever I see him. I make sure to go give him a hug."

He hopes to buy his dad a new house and car, "someday soon."

RYAN Remando

Manager

It is Ryan's manager, with a little help from his godfather, Lito Lito. "When they assign me and schedule, they do it for me," he says. "I can do anything I want to do."

The first big project that (3) directed for him was the ABS-CBN weekly show, "The Young Professionals." He says he's lucky that he got to share the screen with his dad's old friend.

"I was embarrassed, making so many mistakes in front of him," recalls Ryan. "But he was so kind, he didn't mind."

But he wants not to cover his dad's legacy. "I'm determined to be a star."

'Jam for Japan' a roaring success

ALL IT took was a Facebook post announcing a benefit concert for the victims of the earthquake and tsunami in Japan.

In less than a week, over 20 local and international acts expressed interest in performing at the event, which allowed him one of his best for the concert.

A simultaneous "Jam for Japan" was held in the Red 10 in Manila and in Singapore City. Organizers said it was also successful.

DID YOU KNOW...
 LOS ANGELES — Actor James Dean was mobbed as a child. Elizabeth Taylor and her twin sister published her book. Taylor, who died March 20 at 39, told the secret to her success. 14 years ago, but asked that it not be revealed until after she died. In the story published by Daily News online, Taylor said, "When James was 11, his mother (Ida) had him to be mobbed by his mother. It happened to him." Dean died in 1955, at age 24. APF

My kid need not work—Valerie Conception

By Mariel E. Cruz

ICE AGE: Conception doesn't mind if her 5-year-old daughter, Patsy, decides to follow in her showbiz footsteps, but Patsy herself insists on it.

"There were times when she was having so much fun being in front of the camera, but when [her father, Valerio, 'GMA's' director] asked her to take a screen test, she got upset and cried," Valerie recalls.

She is sure it will happen when she'll be 16. Until then, well, "She doesn't need a job. She is the reason I'm working as hard," says Valerie, a single mom at 23.

Valerie was her mom's ABS-CBN's most-juvenile star, "Filipinas Plus No No," which went off the air in December. She supplies milk the break is an opportunity to spend quality time with Patsy, her family and friends.

Work resumes

"I brought my daughter to Patsy Pango, Bulagana," Valerie says. "I went to Bulagana for the first time, with a girl I loved. I visited Taguig City, Shari Marip up North and then moved to the South. I knew that, once work resumed, I wouldn't be able to travel all that much."

Valerie sat cross in the small room via the drama series "Mga Nagbabagong Bulalak" on TV3 as a "special guest star."

The whole cast—led by Valerie, Carla Kianghany, Ruffa Gutierrez, Richard Gomez, Billy Subelino and Sheryl Cruz—were required to join backstage to prepare for the show. "They helped me a lot," says Valerie, "especially since I was a program host for over three years."

Of course she misses her daily grind. "The program," I thought, having lost the program, that it would take a long time for me to adjust, especially, a dollar."

Valerie is also set to make a cameo appearance for ABS-CBN. She is confident that this will not disrupt her working relationship with TV3.

"My manager [Randy Aguilera] spoke with Channel executives before I joined 'Tagalog Nights.' [The channel] is for one of my best talents who go to work in both networks. What more can I ask for?"

"Mga Nagbabagong Bulalak," directed by Jon Red and Don Pardo, airs weekdays after "Mga Babagong Bagong."

Because rockers are people, too

MOST NOW shows on local TV are predictable in format, scope and style, but the "reality" show Saturdays on CBS has been a happy "rocking" exception.

It's one of the few local "reality" programs on the tube—and, most interestingly, the family whose activities it chooses to chronicle from week to week is the decidedly unrocked "average family" that is the pretentious household of rock icon Jay-Z and his wife, Beyoncé.

For the weekly show's producers, they have been blessed with three of the best kids in the music business: Quincy, Chancel and J'Zelle. And they now share a platform between their parents and live together in an unusual way—because, given the apparent intrusion of the "reality TV" format and its all-seeing cameras, their shared life is also their performance.

The last time we checked in with the family, the full siblings were taking out time to rehearse their parents' "wedding" and, being wacky rockers, they lit up on the "bride" side of being up there for hours—with their parents.

The producers are currently "diffusing" the production with a feed day covering the "drama" with them of the women in the colorful life, who have given him something "special" to remember them by—usually, black.

It was charming to see Jay-Z, who usually comes on strong and "sassy" in his iconic rock performance, revealing his soft, personal and even vulnerable side as a father and husband who is not only a loving father.

Dependably, Jay-Z's father, James Brown, is traditionally "rocky" and they give as well as they take in their light, funny and lively exchanges with the guy who used to rock down major roads.

Internet in the Family

A guide for helping children when they go online

INQUIRER IN EDUCATION

(First of two parts)

THE PURPOSE of this guide is to help foster a better awareness and understanding of the Internet and its use among young children.

This report will cover some of the risks associated with using new technology and offer suggestions for reducing those risks. The " dangers " associated with children using the Internet has become a recurrent theme among white parents in previous generations about the " dangers " of television, the individual television, however, this guide does not intend to discourage the Internet and web browsing.

As with traditional media, there is no fixed, cross-effect relationship between what children see on the Internet and their behavior. In other words, content on the Internet does not determine the behavior of a user in the same way that content on television does not directly cause a viewer to react in a certain manner.

The personal, familial and social contexts are key considerations when examining the way in which an individual—whether a child or an adult—uses and appropriates media. As with any other media, technology is a valuable tool but it is not without risks. This report seeks to help reduce these risks by equipping adults with information that will help them become aware of the Internet.

The Internet

Every Internet user is different, thus a particular web content creator will undergo a variety of experiences that will in part determine their use of new technology. It is also important to remember the positive potential of the web beyond the Internet provider's view.

Before discussing the risks associated with the Internet, let's remember some of its benefits. The Internet:

- Provides links and another communication
- Brings together people of different societies
- Provides multicultural exchange among users
- Presents an array of information
- Facilitates and expands research possibilities
- Provides instant access to information
- Promotes higher interactivity between users and technology
- Facilitates learning through the production of digital and personal webpages
- Enhances accessibility by allowing a child to chat with others and play fun games
- Introduces new topics of conversation between adults and children

While learning to read the history of science from the Internet offers and is a contribution to everyday life, we must always be wary of what is not real, sometimes simply giving them a " yes " to an answer is not enough to support their curiosity.

The Family Code

While there is no doubt that adults would prefer that children not use, without their consent, information they use and that people they do not know, sometimes simply giving them a " yes " to an answer is not enough to support their curiosity.

A " family code " that is discussed and agreed upon by the entire family is the best way to include children in establishing a set of rules about the use of the Internet in the home. Getting them involved in developing this code will help them better understand the Internet and feel more responsible when surfing.

Although there is not a singular code that will apply to every family, here are some ideas that may be useful in developing one.

Before devising a code

1. Keep the computer in a common room in the house, such as a family room, where an adult can supervise what children are doing when they are using the Internet. It is not recommended that the computer be kept in a private room, such as a bedroom.
2. Offer the family code as part of your role as the computer in a household to children and friends who visit about the use of the Internet to the children's education and to their learning.
3. Explain that the best way to understand the Internet is to use it. Explain that the best way to understand the Internet is to use it.
4. Discuss with the children the various aspects of the situation: how to use the Internet, personal safety and what to do about bad content and undesirable interactions online.

Sample family code agreed upon by the family

1. The computer should be kept in a common room and members of the family.
2. Viewing pornography, text or hate sites is not allowed.
3. The use of aggression or threats in e-mail, chat lines or in any other form of Internet communication will not be tolerated.
4. Viewing games that involve money or gambling is not allowed. A family decision should be taken before anyone plays a new game.
5. No one should use the Internet for more than a certain amount of time at a time. The amount of time may depend on the child's age.
6. Purchasing articles online or subscribing to a service not previously discussed with the family is not allowed.
7. Personal information such as a child's name, age, sex, home address, telephone number, etc. should not be given out in a forum, chat room, instant message.
8. No one should arrange a face-to-face meeting with " friends " known through the Internet without parental permission and supervision.
9. No one should respond to messages that are unknown, aggressive, insulting, threatening or spam. Inform parents if a child should always inform about.
10. Everyone should share with a household adult any about, concern, problem, distress or uncomfortable situation related to using the Internet.

Uses of Internet

Searching for information

Many adolescents are so familiar with a search engine that they often forget a search engine is a tool. Because of the abundance of information online, young people might feel that they can find the information they need from that single source. However, relying on a single source of information is not always the best way to find information.

Using a search engine to find information is not always the best way to find information. Using a search engine to find information is not always the best way to find information.

Online newspapers—a good first step

Before looking for information about current events, it is a good idea to look for information about current events. Before looking for information about current events, it is a good idea to look for information about current events.

The newspaper that is most familiar to the child is the best one to use. The newspaper that is most familiar to the child is the best one to use.

How do I know it is true?

Most children using the Internet have difficulty with the information they find. They may be able to find information, but they may not be able to find information. They may be able to find information, but they may not be able to find information.

1. Use more than one source of information. Compare books, newspapers, websites and other sources of information. If a site is inconsistent with another one, children will not be able to find the information on that site.
2. Differentiate between facts and opinions. If a site contains opinions, children should be able to find evidence of the facts that may support the opinions, whether through other websites or other sources.
3. Analyze how much research has been done by a website before the information is provided. Scope out the site to find out if the site is reliable.
4. Check the site's links. When children use the Internet, they may find links to other sites. These links can be a good way to find out if a site is reliable. If a site is inconsistent with another one, children will not be able to find the information on that site.
5. Think about the organization and the information it provides. If a site is inconsistent with another one, children will not be able to find the information on that site.

(The content has been checked by a professional journalist.)

How can we help children in their search for information on the Internet?

1. Help them choose a search engine. It is important to select a search engine that will direct children to the information they need. The most popular is Google. Other popular search engines include Yahoo! and Live Search (formerly MSN Search).
